There were scaly lizards that could stand up

Now, in Sweden, there were no supermarkets, and animals simply walked around eating each other. You might think this would be scary, but it was not.

If you were an animal there, you would not feel sad if something ate you, because the very next day, the thing that ate you would probably be eaten by something else!

"Oh my!" said Mr. Hungry.

"But I still need more food..." said Tony Tapeworm, as he came closer to Mr. Hungry.

Well, Sweden happened to be the home of someone called Mr. Hungry. Mr. Hungry was big and tall, and fat and wobbly. As you might expect, he was always hungry!

"But now, we have no more food left!" said Mr. Hungry. "We have eaten everything there is in Sweden!"

"I know," said Tony Tapeworm, "I am growing very hungry. In fact, I have even started to eat the inside of your belly!"

Mr. Hungry loved to eat and he ate everything he saw. He ate apples, he ate grass, he ate fish, and he ate birds. He would even eat something that he picked up from off the ground!

"So you have been eating all the food that I was eating?" asked Mr. Hungry.

"That's right!" said Tony Tapeworm. "That's why you were always so hungry no matter how much you ate!"

One day, Mr. Hungry woke up feeling hungry as usual. He was very excited at the thought of going outside to eat.

"My name is Tony Tapeworm," said the little worm as he jumped off Mr. Hungry's ear and on to the ground. "I have been living in your belly for a long time now."
